Robert C. Kridler, 74, dairymen, real estate and insurance broker, and at one time quite active in Salem city affairs, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home, 1376 E. State st., at 10:55 a. m. today.

Mr. Kridler returned home after his usual morning trip to his farm on the Goshen rd. where he assisted with the milking, complained of feeling ill and his wife summoned a doctor. He died shortly after the arrival of the physician.

He was the son of Henry and Martha Kridler. He had been a resident of Salem for more than 50 years, coming here from Columbiana.

For many years Mr. Kridler was a leader in civic and political affairs in Salem. He was active in all community undertakings and was one of those responsible for bringing new factories to the city. In recent years he had devoted a large part of his time to his dairy farm northwest of the city.

Active as a Mason, he was a member of the Salem bodies, including the Knights Templar and of the Shrine in Cleveland.

Surviving are his wife, Elizabeth; a daughter, Mrs. A. J. Gadue, of Royal Oak, Mich.; two sons, Robert E. at home, Chester E. of Cleveland; two grandsons, and one sister, Mrs. Eula Tullis of Columbiana.

The body was removed to the Arbaugh-Pearce funeral home, pending the completion of burial arrangements. Rites probably will be held Tuesday.

SHORTEST OF COAL
IS FEARED BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—A possible shortage of bituminous coal, which might necessitate federal allocation of available supplies, was foreseen today by the Office of Solid Fuels Coordination.

Howard Gray, acting director of the solid fuels coordination, advised Secretary Ickes, the coordinator, that consumers generally had failed to store coal to protect themselves against possible shortages, despite repeated appeals from Washington.

"In the face of a substantial reduction in the number of days supply of bituminous coal held in consumers' stockpiles as of February 1," Gray said, "the obviously complacent attitude of consumers and dealers alike toward storing reserves fuel is making it more likely that an emergency may occur which would necessitate the allocation of coal by the United States government to protect war industries' fuel supply."

His report showed that soft coal held in consumers' bins and yards as of February 1 represented an average of 34 days supply, compared with an average of 40 days on January 1, and 43 days on last December 1.

"There still is ample mine and production capacity for consumers to build up stockpiles as insurance against interruptions in their customary supply caused by war," said Gray. "But they are moving too slowly."

Ohioan, Five Other German Spies, Are Convicted By U.S.

Kurt Ludwig and Operatives Escape Death Because Crimes Preceded Pearl Harbor

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, March 7—Cocky Kurt Frederick Ludwig, native Ohioan, and five of his hand-picked operatives, described by the government as the core of a Nazi spy ring, were convicted of espionage conspiracy last night but escaped the death penalty because their crimes preceded Pearl Harbor.

The six, including a Long Island housewife, will be called for sentence next Friday, the 13th, with 20 years each as the maximum terms.

All male jury deliberated only two hours and 40 minutes in returning their blanket verdict in the nation's first espionage trial since war's spread to the United States. It was the government's second blow at German spies, however, for 33 persons, convicted in a previous trial, were sentenced here Jan. 2.

Those convicted last night are: Ludwig, 38, born in Fremont, O., but a resident of Germany most of his life.

Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 26, the Long Island housewife;

Rene Froehlich, 31, a former army private who sold Ludwig defense magazines and gathered ship information;

Dr. Paul T. Borchardt, 53, a former German army major who analyzed the data collected;

Frederick Schlosser, 19, who found out when ships would sail; and

Carl Victor Mueller, 36, a machinist who helped collect production figures.

Wipes His Eyes

When the verdict was read, Dr. Borchardt wiped his eyes. Later Mrs. Mayer cried. The rest sat stoically.

Three other members of the ring pleaded guilty and also will be sentenced next week. They were Lucy Boehmier, 18-year-old blonde secretary who was the government's chief witness; Hans (Bubi) Pagel, 20, and Carl Herrmann Schreter, Miami boat captain.

His report showed that soft coal held in consumers' bins and yards as of February 1 represented an average of 34 days supply, compared with an average of 40 days on January 1, and 43 days on last December 1.

"There still is ample mine and production capacity for consumers to build up stockpiles as insurance against interruptions in their customary supply caused by war," said Gray. "But they are moving too slowly."

DEATH OR VICTORY,
M'ARTHUR OUTLOOK

And Odds Heavily Against
Ultimate Victory, Say
Military Men

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 7—Military quarters here today were talking about the battle of Bataan as a "death or victory" struggle for General Douglas MacArthur and his valiant fighting men, the odds for death or possibly capture being heavily against those for ultimate victory.

Yet the fact that there was even a slight chance for triumphant survival of the Philippines force, as the fourth month of Pacific was opened, was regarded as little short of a military miracle in view of what has happened to the defenders of Hongkong, Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

Planned Ahead

Actually, officers who have known MacArthur for years explained the "miracle" in terms of thorough pre-liminary planning for the defense of Bataan long before the war began. Of equal importance, however, is the fact that MacArthur has out-generaled, and his troops have out-fought, the Japanese in every engagement to date.

U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa said the ring extended to Spain, Portugal, China and South America. He hailed the verdict as "a great victory for the cause of justice and democracy."

India's Political, Racial Rivals Talking
Unity Now With Axis Breath On Their Necks

WASHINGTON, March 7—(Wide World)—India's political and racial rivals, apparently fearing and hating the Japanese more than they do one another, seem for the first time in their fight for freedom to want to talk turkey about national unity.

If they can together, England offers the possibility of independence and the United Nations offer everything they can throw together against the Burma spearhead of Japanese invasion.

Surprisingly, Mahatma Gandhi, kingpin of Indian civil disobedience to England, started the ball rolling for unity when he voluntarily stepped down as leader of the powerful All-India Congress party (National-Hindu) rather than hinder the war effort.

His parting words were, "Do not stab Britain in the back." His successor, Jawaharlal Nehru, who had been serving a prison term for ob-structionism, when released was more cooperative toward England with his own country threatened.

Nearly 50 rich native potentates among the 583 who control, in feudal states, perhaps 27 per cent of the total land area and 63,000,000 of population, have swung over to Britain and many more are preparing to follow.

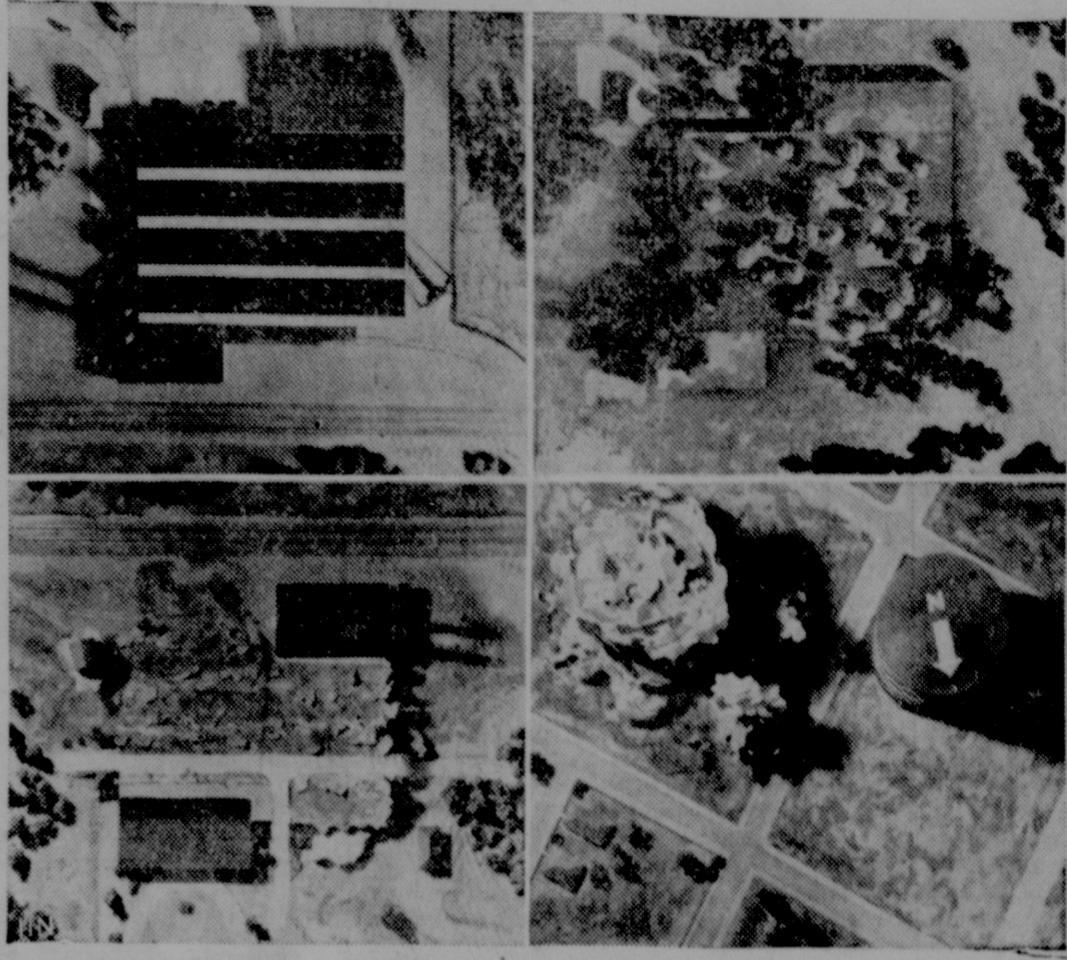

Fighting For India

Even Ali Jinnah, chief "no" man to everything for the Muslim league, which as the second largest Indian political party represents 80,000,000 Moslems, has begun to talk more about fighting for India than for a separate Moslem state or Moslem equality with India's 240,000,000 Hindus in the central government.

It has become clear to these leaders that fabulous mother India could become the final bloody battlefield of this war—if the Japanese come in from Burma and the Nazis pour down through Persia.

Allied and Axis powers conceivably could exhaust each other in titanic struggle for this great eastern war chest, the winner deciding

TRUCK BLAST

More Than 100 Reported

Vehicle Burns for Almost
Two Hours Before
Letting Go

(By Associated Press)

SMITHFIELD, N. C., March 7—At least five persons were killed and more than 100 were reported injured near here early today in the delayed explosion of a fire-ridden ammunition-laden truck, the detonation of which was heard over a radius of 50 miles in eastern North Carolina.

A hotel, filling station and a tavern were leveled to the ground and windows in Selma, a town about two miles away, were shattered. The cement highway under the truck was ripped wide and deep for a distance of 30 feet.

Fail To Head Warnings

Dr. E. N. Booker, Johnston county coroner, said that at least five persons were injured fatally, two of them in an automobile which he said failed to observe highway patrol warnings. The others were killed in the leveling of the Talton hotel.

Dr. Booker said that George Stroop of Gastonia and Cecil Propst of Lawndale, in the automobile, were told that they should proceed around the truck, earlier involved in a collision with an automobile at the roadside community, at their own risk.

"They decided to take the chance of proceeding on their way," the coroner said, "and just as they got almost even with the truck it exploded with a terrible noise which folks in Rocky Mount, 50 miles away, reported they heard."

The three victims in the hotel were not immediately identified.

The injured were taken to hospitals in Smithfield, Goldsboro and Raleigh.

Buildings Damaged

Dr. Booker said that all buildings within some 300 yards of the explosion were badly damaged or leveled and that half the store windows in Selma were blown out.

Most of the casualties were bystanders who had watched the truck burn for almost two hours before exploding.

State Highway Patrolman H. C. Bobbitt said the explosion, heard 25 miles away, occurred at 3 a. m. The auto-truck collision took place at 1:15 a. m. and firemen summoned from nearby Selma and Smithfield had succeeded in extinguishing the fire in the automobile when they were forced to return to their stations for water.

The drivers, none of whom was hurt, were Merle Lockhart, 30, Charles Lintz and Thomas Karns, 66, all of North Lima; Elwood Longenecker, 29, of R. D. 1, Columbiana; Marcus Clizkenger, 32, of Columbiana, and an unidentified motorist.

Other patrol arrests yesterday included:

HOWARD LIGHTNER, 24, of 189 Wilson st., Salem, reckless driving; fined $10 and costs by Justice J. R. Gause at Deerfield.

Albert Clager, 40, of R. D. 5, Lisbon, failure to observe a stop sign; fined $5 and costs by Justice Richard Firestone at Lisbon.

Donald Williams, 18, of Elyria, reckless driving; fined $15 and costs by Mayor Dickson at anfield.

Reduced load limits will also be effective on the following state routes in Columbiana county: Route 154 from Route 7 to Elton; Route 164 from Route 518 to Mahoning county line; Route 165 from Mahoning county line to line of Section 21; the Columbiana-Middleton road; Middleton-New Waterford road; the road from New Waterford north to State Route 14; East Palestine-New Waterford road in Sections 20-21-22; the Glenmore-Rock Camp road, and the Wells-Salleville road to State Route 30.

Stockholm advises to the London Daily Herald said the Russians had occupied Losminio, a village only six miles south of Vyamza, which lies on the Moscow-Smolensk highway 125 miles west of Moscow.

The Soviet information bureau made no specific claim as to Losminio, but said several populated places were occupied yesterday in a continued advance marked by repulse of German counter-attacks.

It said 263 villages and towns on the central front had been recaptured from Feb. 6 to March 5.

The London Times urged immediate British action to bring about an agreement with Russia and the United States which would minimize Soviet anxiety concerning prosecution of the war and postwar plans.

"There is beyond a doubt," it said, "a growing inclination among Soviet leaders to feel that Russia has been called upon, with indirect and insufficient help from her allies, to bear the main brunt of Hitler's assault."

Here is the official language:

SPEEDUP FOR SURVIVAL

If Walter Lippmann is hitting the nail on the head, the war effort would move faster with more young men in key administrative posts, including cabinet officers. He argues that the New Deal assault on the supreme court in 1937 for over-age fuddy-duddyism should be revived at this time for reform of the executive branch, where do-gooders are doing irreparable injury. Vastly more is entailed in this than the personal whim of Columnist Lippmann. In 1942, action is everything.

The plotters who have marked the United States for extinction are gambling on their judgment that this country won't be able to pull itself together before it is too late. They have admitted this freely; it has been pointed out in many ways that they expect the representative governments to succumb to the dynamic drive of the dictatorships. The latter readily admit the potentialities of the manpower and resources of the United States, for instance, but are confident these cannot be brought to bear in time to change the quick decision they are hopeful of reaching. It is not potentialities that count—only actualities. The aggressors know they can be beaten when the opposition has had time to arm; they don't propose to wait.

One thing only could upset their calculations—an infinitely greater speed of decision and action than they believed possible. That has been the secret of Russia's success against Germany, though Russia was rated above the United States in pre-war calculations.

It could be the secret of this country's success, if it could be managed—and, of course, it must be managed. Mr. Lippman isn't discussing an academic issue. He is speculating on the means of doing the thing the United States must do to win the war. This nation must move infinitely faster than it was expected to move, which means it must move a whale of a lot faster than it is moving now. If young men can turn the trick, let them try. In 1950, when there is more time, the thing can be cussed and discussed.

HOW'S MacARTHUR DOING?

When the second batch of American troops landed in Ireland, they wanted to know how MacArthur was doing in the Philippines. That was the day the general sent his patched-up planes over Subic bay, north of Bataan peninsula, and messed up five Japanese ships, including a pair of troop transports.

MacArthur did all right that day. The Japanese had no planes in the air, as it happened, but he probably didn't know beforehand! He had to take a chance. He did take a chance, and he won. Over on the other side of the world, where thousands of American soldiers are being assembled for what Germany thinks may be an invasion drive aimed at Norway, that probably means even more than it does back home.

Whatever may be done or left undone elsewhere, Gen. MacArthur has set the fighting pace for the United States army in this war. His campaign was well planned. When war began, the plans were well executed. The men who survived and the men who died shared the honor that belongs with military success and courage. Their stand on Bataan peninsula against overwhelming odds has had a greater impact on the American spirit than ten thousand times ten thousand lugubrious statements about the theoretical aspects of the war. It will be a dark day when an American can't inquire any longer, "How's MacArthur doing?"

VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

The search, fruitless so far, for a noisemaker that will do the air raid warning job for American cities is beginning to get silly. Apparently what everyone has in mind is a gadget that will make a million, or at the very least a thousand, human beings jump up simultaneously and say, "Ah, the air raid warning."

It can't be done. There are Americans who can't hear their own alarm clocks, their wives calling them to supper, their husbands asking where the towels are. In all probability, there will be Americans who won't hear the crack of doom—who will nod sleepily and ask, "Did somebody say something?"

WORSE THAN INCONVENIENT

Leon Henderson's chilling announcement that there is no rubber available for 30,000,000 civilian automobiles coincides with abandonment of hope for Java. The United Nations—and the United States—have no chance now of quickly recovering their source of rubber. For all present purposes, Japan has a monopoly on the world's rubber supply.

This will mean vastly more than inconvenience to the owners of the civilian vehicles. Thousands—probably millions—of those cars are being used to transport workers to and from war production plants. The absurd notion that the automobile still is a luxury is knocked sky-high by its first contact with reality: the automobile is more often a necessity than a luxury.

If it hasn't been plain before, it must be plain now what a fiendish plot was hidden in Japan's sudden thrust into the Netherlands East Indies. Nothing could have been more shrewdly calculated to handicap American economy than the sudden and complete loss of its rubber supply. It will require, as Mr. Henderson points out, all the ingenuity of a people with ingenuity to spare, to keep 'em rolling in order to keep 'em flying.

THE STARS SAY:

(For Sunday, March 8)

SUNDAY'S horoscope may be favorable for all manner of spiritual, cultural, community, group and public affairs, which should rise to heights of activity and promise. Nevertheless there may be signs of delay, disruptions, and surprising turns to events, which may be hopelessly nullified and bungled by indulgence in arguments, quarrels, rash and impetuous conduct. With caution in this respect there should be much harmony and gratification.

Those whose birthday it is may have a successful and prosperous year if they will shun all reckless, violent, wayward and impetuous behavior carrying it to excess and regret. A diplomatic, tactful, courteous and carefully planned strategy, especially in public and group affairs, may avert dangerous, disintegrating and disappointing circumstances and defeat. Make no hasty or rash decisions. Guard against accidents, when traveling especially.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be reckless, headstrong, passionate and violent, erratic and ungovernable, thus inviting self-defeat.

(For Monday, March 9)

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is not a propitious one, showing prospect of danger and selfundoing through indulgent, extravagant, excessive and unwarranted practices which are bound to run at cross purposes with the best interests and to arouse the antagonism of those in high places and authority.

An overweening pursuit of pleasure may lead to loss of credit, standing and also influential friends and well-wishers. Safeguard these rigidly.

Those whose birthday it is may be the creators of their own defeat and downfall by indulgence or an exaggerated pursuit of pleasure, with extravagance, unwarranted outlay of funds and other excesses arousing the opposition of friends and those in place and power. Safeguard these, and the financial credit, as well as personal reputation and happiness, will remain steadfast.

If it hasn't been plain before, it must be plain now what a fiendish plot was hidden in Japan's sudden thrust into the Netherlands East Indies. Nothing could have been more shrewdly calculated to handicap American economy than the sudden and complete loss of its rubber supply. It will require, as Mr. Henderson points out, all the ingenuity of a people with ingenuity to spare, to keep 'em rolling in order to keep 'em flying.

CONDITIONING FOR THE WAR EFFORT

TELLS OF ADVANCES IN MEDICINE

Layman Submits Series of Discussions

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A BOOK by George W. Gray, The Advancing Front of Medicine, consists of a series of discussions of recent research work and recent discoveries in medicine.

The chapter headings include: "The Aptitudes of the Body," "The Sea We Live In," "Bleeders and

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Cloppers," "High Blood Pressure," "Sulfanilamide," "Influenza," "Allergy," "Anxiety," "Brain Storms," "Sleep," "Smoke," "Drink," "Cancer," and "Aging."

Mr. Gray is not a doctor but has been described as "probably one of the ablest popularizers of science writing in English," a judgment in which I concur.

"The Five Ailments" suggests to Dr. Gray the poem by Walter De La Mare:

It's a very odd thing—

As odd as can be—

That whatever Miss T eats

Turns into Miss T.

This poetical observation contains all the mystery that physiological chemistry has been trying to unravel for two hundred years.

High Blood Pressure

The chapter on "High Blood Pressure" gives a very restrained and not sensational review of the best modern work on high blood pressure, including Goldblatt's experiments on the constriction of the renal arteries, a subject which is shaking all the medical clinics at the present moment. It also discusses the possibility of surgery in the treatment of high blood pressure.

If you have been drugged with sulfanilamide or any of the sulfonylurea drugs of late, you may find it comforting to have a clear exposition of the nature of the drugs in Chapter VII of Mr. Gray's book.

I think it is too bad that Mr. Gene Tunney did not read Mr. Gray's chapter on "Smoke" before he blew off his cylinder head in print lately. He lists all the possible dangers of smoking; he admits there is no evidence that it is beneficial in any way, but he does not believe that its injurious effects are very widespread. Only those who elect to smoke, smoke.

A Fair View

It was once said of the biologist, Leopold, that each summer as he started on his vacation, he packed one hundred cigars. His practice was to return home as soon as the one hundred cigars were used up. He had found by experience that when he was having a good time he didn't smoke much, so he made his supply stretch out further and thus permitted himself to enjoy a longer holiday.

Under the chapter on "Drink," again Mr. Gray points out all the possible dangers of the habit. Responsible citizens have three attitudes toward the matter. Among one group, liquor is regarded as an emissary of the devil. In the second, it is regarded as an arouser of cheer, the invoker of hospitality, the companion of good fellowship, the servant of man. The third group takes a middle ground, knows what its dangers are, what its advantages are and feels that it is one man's meat and another man's poison.

I think Mr. Gray is fair to all disputants in the various controversies that rage around the subject.

Asks Measures To Halt Forest Fires

Although Columbiana county has not yet been incorporated into the organized forest fire control district of Ohio, the division of forestry has asked the Salem News to cooperate in encouraging the landowners of this county to comply with the basic safety precautions against forest fires in the interest of national defense.

In a communication received from James D. Wells, director of educational and informational activities for the division of forestry, particular emphasis is made of the current demands for sound hardwood timber in the present national emergency. Oak, ash, walnut, maple, and poplar are in current demand at good prices for direct use in the manufacture of military and naval equipment and supplies, and also in ordinary commercial channels to replace other materials now covered by priorities for the national defense program.

Damaged Timber No Good

"Fire damaged timber is of little or no value either for military or civilian use," states Wells, "and landowners who permit fire to sweep through their timberland cannot expect to profitably market their logs now or in the future."

England has three prime goals in India now: (1) to keep India fighting on the United Nations side; (2) to prevent a civil war developing from any independence gesture; and (3) to keep Britain's richest possession as a dominion within the British commonwealth of nations.

Need of Allied Victory

The first now seems to be an established fact. Political factions are apprehensive of the outside threat, and the Indian national liberal federation—a growing body which subscribes to neither the congress party nor the Muslim league—insists that the most important thing for India is an Allied victory.

Indian leaders in Washington say their country is in the war for the duration, independence or no independence, as could jump its army from 1,000,000 volunteers, some of them already fighting beside the British on a dozen fronts, to 8,000,000 if there were enough weapons to equip them. This, they add, goes for all races, religions, creeds and castes.

Japanese gun-thunder, rolling up from Burma, seems also to have improved British hopes that India willingly will stay in the empire, perhaps later taking the same status as Canada and Australia.

The first sign came when Gandhi, who had always insisted on complete severance, praised British bravery in this war.

German and Japanese propaganda had exhorted India to "throw off the Anglo-Saxon yoke." But stupidly the Axis at the same time urged frontier tribesmen and wild hill bands to loot and plunder Hindu bazaars and settlements in the Punjab, and then—"march on to Delhi!"

Lord Linlithgow, viceroy of India, had talked of relaying the independence issue until after the war, and Prime Minister Churchill had warned that England could not risk any move now that might jeopardize her commitments and guarantees to the various creeds, races and interests.

Native governors of 11 provinces, members of the congress or Nationalist party, quit in protest. Jinnah fanned the flames by urging Moslems in all provinces and districts to celebrate the crack in opposition solidarity.

Then, suddenly, into these ageless enmities of 390,000,000 people speaking 200 different languages, stalked the specter of Japanese invasion.

Indian newspapers and scholars quickly saw the Axis catastrophe at work among them, and put the heat on both England and their own politicians.

constitution itself and the body which is to frame it must be the outcome of agreement between principal elements in India's national life."

England has three prime goals in India now: (1) to keep India fighting on the United Nations side; (2) to prevent a civil war developing from any independence gesture; and (3) to keep Britain's richest possession as a dominion within the British commonwealth of nations.

Damaged Timber No Good

"Fire damaged timber is of little or no value either for military or civilian use," states Wells, "and landowners who permit fire to sweep through their timberland cannot expect to profitably market their logs now or in the future."

Aside from the economic loss occasioned by the destruction of timber, it is pointed out that fires sweeping through grass, brush, and woodlands burn off the rich leaf litter and destroy the soil humus, so essential for soil fertility. When this mulch and humus is destroyed, the water absorbing capacity of the soil is seriously reduced, thus contributing to both flood and drought conditions.

"Although the burning over of broom sedge pastures is a common practice in Columbiana county, it should be discouraged," continues Wells. "While the pasture may look a little greener for a few weeks in the spring, there is absolutely no evidence that the quality or quantity of pasture is improved by this practice; in fact, there seems to be abundant evidence that only the broom sedge and coarse weed species will survive repeated burning.

The loss of soil humus is often a fire hazard to adjacent woodlands are further reasons to supplant this dangerous practice by mowing the broom sedge and applying lime to the soil."

Advice on Burning

Basic safety precautions against forest and grass fires include the spacing or plowing of a safety strip several feet wide around the material to be burned, whether it is a single brush pile or an entire field.

Fires should not be lit before 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and sufficient help and tools should be available to handle the job.

"HUTCH" OF THE R.A.F. by PETER MOIR

SYNOPSIS

David Hutchinson, American aviator with the Royal Air Force "Hornets," makes a forced landing on a golf course in Kent, England, where he meets lovely Wendy Bruce, on leave from the Ambulance Corps. Just as David finishes repairing his plane, he hears a familiar drone in the sky. Seeing three Messerschmitts chasing one Spitfire, he flies off to join in the fight. Wendy stands rooted to the spot, watching the battle till the planes disappear in the clouds. Then she wends her way to "The Downs," ancestral home of her father, Lord Harrowsdale. War had changed the luxurious mode of life at "The Downs" for all were doing their bit; his Lordship was an air warden, while Lady Harrowsdale directed the local hospital. Wendy can't get the American out of her mind; even now he might be lying on the ground somewhere wounded or dead. Arriving home she finds her brother, Philip, there on leave impatiently waiting for an "opening" in the Hornets. The telephone rings—Orders for Philip to join the squadron immediately.... One of the Hornets had been shot down nearby. Could it be David? Wendy wonders. Philip has promised to let her know if it was, so all afternoon Wendy hovers near the telephone. When the news finally comes that David is safe, she bursts into tears.

CHAPTER FIVE

Hutchinson took off from the golf links, banked sharply and roared, his motor wide open, in pursuit of the three Messerschmitt 109's that were harrying the lone British fighter. His reparation of the motor had been successful and it was now running as smoothly as a Swiss watch, and with the same precision, though a million fold more noisily. He watched the instrument board, complicated beyond belief to a layman, but an open book to him, and listened to the screaming motor that was giving him its all. A smile of satisfaction flashed into his eyes, then changed into a look of grim determination.

The four planes were moving away from him, and it would take longer to catch them. Why didn't the English pilot bring the fight his way? Perhaps he was too busy with the Jerries and hadn't seen the friendly plane take off. And wonder. With three of them after him, the fellow had his hands full. David hoped that the enemy planes hadn't spotted him either. He might come up on the last one's tail and get him before there was the chance for a counter-attack. This would make the fighting even at two all. He didn't underestimate the strength of the Germans. They were good and had plenty of courage, and an even fight was not to be disdained. To Me. 109s were faster, but the Spitfires were easier to handle, more maneuverable.

And the British planes also had the advantage of the eight synchronized machine guns. Hutch glances at the simple bit of mechanism that would start them barking out a message of death at his lightest touch.

What was it that captured German pilot had said? Something about "Stuffy" Dowding's eight machine-guns. Oh yes. He had said that no bomber in the world could stay in formation when the British leg go with "Stuffy" Dowding's eight machine-guns. "Good old Stuffy," David muttered, at the same time trying to get more speed.

"Stuffy" was the affectionate nickname by which the junior officers of the R.A.F. called him, but his real title and name were Air Chief Marshal, Sir Hugh Caswall Tremerehe Dowding, and he was in command of Britain's fighting planes. The men under him idolized "Stuffy," believing justly that he was responsible to a great extent for the successful defense of Britain in the air. David had met him once at the field where he had come to congratulate the Hornets, and remembered the tall, cadaverous Scotsman with more than pleasure. Something he had said passed now through the young American's mind and he quoted it to himself as he sped along through the air at terrific speed. It was to the effect that, "the life of a military aviator consists of hours of

Newest Weapon To Fight the Dive Bomber

The gun being assembled at the General Motors Pontiac Division plant, Detroit, by Charles McDermott and Elmer Spaulding is the Oerlikon, which the British Navy believes is the answer to the dive bomber threat. South, McKinley Advance
Into Semi-Finals of Tourney

Two Youngstown and two Canton quintets advanced into the third round of the sectional tourney at the South fieldhouse last night after posting wins over their respective second round opponents. Youngstown East, one of the event's four seeded fives, smothered Struthers under a barrage of buckets to win handily, 64-23.

The win avenged an early season upset loss suffered at the hands of the Big Red. Lyden, Gabriel, Delleck and Vicarel combined to score 49 points for the winners, while Don McPhee paced the Struthers outfit with nine points.

Youngstown South enjoyed a field day at the expense of a weak Hubbard team, 59-27. Glenn Culp, stellar Red and Blue forward, was red hot and hit the hoop for a grand total of 19 tallies while Gordy Harrison slipped in 13 to help out. Campana, Hubbard star, was high man for the losers with 14 markers.

Canton Lehman, conqueror of Salem High's Quakers in the opening round of the tournament, advanced still farther as they drubbed a badly outclassed Newton Falls aggregation, 52-28. Chet Fair and Jim Snyder paced the Polar Bear attack with 21 and 10 points, respectively, while Neiss, Layshock and Harnicar totaled 23 of the losers' points.

In the final game on the card last night, the Canton McKinley Bulldogs trimmed Campbell Memorial in the only close game of the evening, 38-27.

DEATH OR VICTORY, M'ARTHUR OUTLOOK

And Odds Heavily Against
Ultimate Victory, Say

to withdraw his forces to corregidor and the other forts guarding manila bay. There they should be able to continue the fight in the hope that reinforcements will be sent.

"There is no doubt," said one of MacArthur's friends, "that he is determined to see the Philippines fight through to the finish. If he has any choice he will never leave—until death or victory. Only an order which, as a soldier, he would have to obey would get him out."

The rugged Bataan peninsula had been chosen long before as the best section of Luzon island on which to make a stand against numerically superior forces. Full preparations for its defense were made before the war.

Strong Points Established

Since the country is mountainous there were certain valleys through which MacArthur knew the Japanese would be compelled to drive forward their attacks and strong points were established to hold those. The rest of the narrow front had to be only lightly held.

Thus while the enemy had a manpower superiority which some authorities have estimated at 10 to 1 on Luzon, he has never been able to bring up at any one time a force so overwhelming that the Americans could not resist successfully.

MacArthur's reports to the war department have shown that he was thoroughly informed beforehand on every important move the Japanese made. Much of this intelligence came from Filipinos in occupied areas outside Bataan. He probably gained other data from reconnaissance operations of the tiny air force he has managed to keep intact.

There is reason to believe that the question of supplies—food and ammunition chiefly—may not trouble the defenders seriously for some time to come.

But despite all the factors which thus far have worked in favor of the men who hold Bataan, the general belief in military quarters here is that when the Japanese get ready to take it without regard to their own cost in manpower they undoubtedly can do so. Even Corregidor and its satellite forts are not considered impregnable.

— Strong Points Established —

Since the country is mountainous there were certain valleys through which MacArthur knew the Japanese would be compelled to drive forward their attacks and strong points were established to hold those. The rest of the narrow front had to be only lightly held.

Thus while the enemy had a manpower superiority which some authorities have estimated at 10 to 1 on Luzon, he has never been able to bring up at any one time a force so overwhelming that the Americans could not resist successfully.

MacArthur's reports to the war department have shown that he was thoroughly informed beforehand on every important move the Japanese made. Much of this intelligence came from Filipinos in occupied areas outside Bataan. He probably gained other data from reconnaissance operations of the tiny air force he has managed to keep intact.

There is reason to believe that the question of supplies—food and ammunition chiefly—may not trouble the defenders seriously for some time to come.

But despite all the factors which thus far have worked in favor of the men who hold Bataan, the general belief in military quarters here is that when the Japanese get ready to take it without regard to their own cost in manpower they undoubtedly can do so. Even Corregidor and its satellite forts are not considered impregnable.
